Dear friends, as I have been talking about self-management for a while, and recently about self-government, I decided to write this article to make clear my position and vision on self-management and on self-government, in fact, to write about my model of self-management and self-government.

First, let's start with the concepts of self-management and self-government, self-management, in the economic sense, it is an economic model where the economy is managed by the workers themselves, and there may be intervention by the state or not, if the state is of the workers, as a mass state, there may be intervention (planning) of self-management or even simple planning of self-management. Self-government, on the other hand, is basically a self-managed government, managed by the workers themselves, where workers and people, having autonomy of their own, can help in the administration and organization of society in a voluntary, mutual and collective way, with direct democracy. There may be a leader elected via direct democracy or not.

After that introduction, on what is self-management and self-government, I can then talk about my position and vision on both. Basically, self-management and self-government are excellent forms that must be adopted by workers and people for the administration of human society on Earth. As well as the total socialization of the economy through self-management, where all private properties, this means of production, become cooperatives and free associations where workers and people directly control their management and their organization, keeping the properties clear personal, such as houses, small properties, small businesses, small farms, etc. Along with a self-managed state (self-government), where it is a state of masses with direct democracy, a fully socialized state managed by the workers and people themselves.

This alternative, that of self-management and that of self-government, are excellent alternatives for combating neoliberalism, capitalism, "anarcho" - capitalism, right-wing libertarianism (which is not at all libertarian) and also state capitalism which is defended by Marxist-Leninists. In order to achieve both self-management and self-government, it may be through the revolutionary or the voluntary-reformist way, where the workers themselves create their cooperatives and free associations and buy the means of production and properties and turn them into cooperatives, strengthening the unions, separating the unions from the neoliberal state, thus enabling self-management and self-government in a voluntary and anarchist way, without needing the state, and consequently, there is socialization of the state and transforming the state into a state of masses and direct democracy.

With that, we can already speak of self-managing monteirism / mounterism, or even anarchomonteirism / anarchomounterism. Of course, keeping the mythical question and the Anunnaki question, since the Anunnaki model is literally a family-monarchical self-management together with a monarchic self-government. While the mythical question does not get in the way, as myths can live in their communities / regions separate from other humans or even mixed with humans, or even having their own countries, as in the case of an Anunnaki country in the Middle East, but this is a topic to be discussed when we achieve self-management and self-government worldwide or are about to do the same.

Self-management and self-government are excellent concepts for us to adopt and this is what awaits us in the future, of course, with an extraphysical automation of self-management and self-government, as in the case of IASSMEC, and also a focus on extra-physical and psiontecnological research to further strengthen the self-management, and even the creation of a self-managed and democratized scientific community, so that everyone can contribute to it, and of course, with the presence of the extrascientific / parascientific community for extrascientific / parascientific studies.

An important issue that I felt the need to address in this article is on the issue of security, judicial and military. Well, basically, in a self-managed society, the police would be replaced by popular squads that act in a way to fight crime fairly and equally, where people themselves protect themselves and help one another, where justice is done in a humane way and empathetic, replacing prisons with re-education centers or even re-education, since prisons (in capitalism) are literally concentration camps and the police (in capitalism) and justice (in capitalism) are quite totalitarian. Getting to the point of no longer needing justice, since as most crimes are creations of capitalism, and with the re-education and spiritualization and empathization of people, it will be understood that the issue is the person being hurt internally (mentally / emotionally) and it needs to be healed. Of course there are lost cases, but these are just to isolate yourself from society or even think about what to do with them if we are going to a self-managed society. And on the military issue, we can opt for pacifism, since the world would be totally self-managed, with a voluntary army in case there is an internal or external problem that the army is needed, maybe not even necessary, even with the creation of an army voluntary in cases of crisis.

Finally, let's talk about the question of money and credit, well, in a self-managed society, at first, there would be no money, but a credit system, where people receive according to their abilities and skills, everything a person receives and has is based on their abilities and skills, where the abolition of the credit system can be thought of in a self-managed society, mainly in the form of value, but this is something to be thought about and seen if the self-management society starts.

In conclusion, this was one of the longest articles I have written so far, if not, the longest recently, I tried to explain as much as possible about the issue of self-management and self-government, about the opposition, it could participate and gradually be absorbed by self-management and self-government, so that the opposition is only in terms of social and ideas, as well as the religious-spiritual issue, it could be simply turning the spiritual and mythical issue, with respect for religions and forms of spirituality, together with turning all humans into metahumans and the implantation of extra-physicalism.

One theme, which I feel is important to talk about, before finishing this article, is about the issue of media and culture, in a self-managed society, everyone has access to the media and the same right to a voice, of course, there is combating racism, xenophobia, gratuitous violence, speciesism and awtokism (anti-mythicalism) itself, but so that it is the people themselves who do this and prevent negative things from spreading too easily, thus avoiding bureaucracy and regulation problems etc. Where people themselves self-regulate the media and culture in a democratic and self-managed way.

In conclusion, I explained here as much as possible my opinion and position on self-management and self-government, I explained on all possible topics within self-management and self-government, at least the most basic ones, I could extend more about the economic question and politics, but this is something that I will leave later when I start writing well. However, we can already get a sense of what self-management and self-government are in my conception of self-management and self-government.
